Airport security 'allowed to read your emails'

Israeli security officials at Ben Gurion airport are legally allowed to demand access to tourists' email accounts and deny them entry if they refuse, the country's top legal official said. Details of the policy were laid out by Attorney General Yehuda Weinstein in a written response to the Association for Civil Rights in Israel (ACRI), the group said.

Course teaches authorities to thwart explosions

An Advanced Improvised Explosive Device Disposal course conducted last week at Northwest Florida Regional Airport was planned in January but occurred the night before authorities hunted down the Boston Marathon bombing suspects. The course is open to domestic military technicians and students from federal agencies, and it teaches them how to dismantle and dispose bomb. Read more

Saudi Court Convicts 8 on Terrorism Charges

The official Saudi news agency says a court has convicted eight men on terrorism-related charges, including plotting attacks on an oil refinery. The defendants, seven Saudis and one Yemeni, were given prison sentences ranging from four months to eight years. Read more

Maldon arthritis man quits flying over airport security

A builder with five metal joint implants has given up flying because of airport security alarms going off. Roger (Bob) Hickford, 71, of Maldon, Essex, has arthritis and had his first joint replacement - his right hip - 12 years ago. Whenever he uses an airport, the metal in his body sets off the security alarms and he is taken to one side. The embarrassment of the alarms and his "painful" wait in queues means he and his wife Rose no longer want to fly. Read more

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev had no firearms, explosives when captured

More details have emerged to shed light on the last few hours before 19-year old Dzhokhar Tsarnaev was captured hiding on a boat in Watertown, Massachusetts. Tsarnaev had no weapons or explosives with him in the boat where he was hiding. Boston police officers say that the heavy fire directed at the boat was probably the result of chaos of the moment. Experts: security of U.S. mass transit system must be tightened

Counterterrorism experts are arguing that security on America's mass transit lines must be tightened in light of the foiled plot to attack a Toronto passenger train. The plan to attack Canada's transit system highlights security holes in America's commuter system, and the challenges involved in securing this vast system. Read more

Laguna police recover bomb in car engine

Police have recovered a powerful explosive device inside an Indian businessman's car in Alaminos, Laguna, an official said Thursday. A car repair shop near Manila alerted police after a mechanic found the device Wednesday inside the vehicle's engine compartment, which the owner and two compatriots had driven there for repairs, said Chief Superintendent Benito Estipona. Hamas teaches Palestinian schoolboys how to fire Kalashnikovs

Palestinian schoolboys are learning how to fire Kalashnikovs, throw grenades and plant improvised explosive devices as part of a programme run by Hamas's education ministry. Hamas authorities introduced the 'Futuwwa', or youth programme into the state curriculum last September for 37,000 Palestinian boys aged between 15 and 17, conceiving it as a scheme intended to initiate a new generation of Palestinian men in the struggle against Israel. Gosport man 'created and sold bogus bomb detectors'

A Gosport man manufactured bogus explosive detectors and sold them for almost £600 each, a court heard. Anthony Williamson, 58, is accused of creating and selling the device, which cannot be named for legal reasons. It was claimed the device could detect traces of explosive, drugs and human remains but an expert has said it was "completely ineffectual." Read more
