Ultra-sensitive polymer detects explosive devices

A chemical that's often the key ingredient in improvised explosive devices (IEDs) can be quickly and safely detected in trace amounts by a new polymer created by a team of Cornell chemists. The polymer, which potentially could be used in low-cost, handheld explosive detectors and could supplement or replace bomb-sniffing dogs, was invented in the lab of William Dichtel, assistant professor of chemistry and chemical biology.

Bag's-eye view of Changi Airport

It is by no sheer good fortune that the baggage handling system at Singapore's Changi Airport is consistently rated among the world's best. Costing $140 million to install, the high-tech system at Terminal 3 can handle 10,400 bags per hour. Amazingly, it is run by just two operators and one supervisor in the control room.

Ben Gurion airport set to automate luggage security

Israel's main international airport is set to begin trials of a new automated baggage security system that will cut down on the time passengers spend waiting in line to check in their luggage. The new system, called Hold Baggage Screening, or HBS, is slated to replace the current airport security system, which is based on questioning passengers, assessing risk by profiling and opening bags.

Perth Airport security staff extend strike

Security screening staff at Perth Airport's Qantas terminal have extended their strike for another 48 hours after their employer locked out staff and refused a union wage demand. The workers, who say they have been offered lower wages than their Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide counterparts, started the industrial action on Tuesday.

Fighting terrorism: Do 'deradicalisation' camps really work?

Thousands of militants around the world are enrolled in deradicalisation schemes designed to lead them away from extremism. But doubts are growing about how effective they are. Shab haz Ahmed has a story to tell. It is an old story, one told by many men at many different times. It is about going to war, training, fighting in a foreign land, watching friends die and finally returning home, disillusioned by defeat.

Afghan President says 'war on terror' may encourage radical Islam

Afghanistan President Hamid Karzai said in the US-Islamic World Forum held in Doha, the Muslim world was "in turmoil" and wondered whether the "war on terror" led by the United States since 2001 was to blame for the radicalization. Read more

UK foils 'nail bomb and shotgun' revenge terror plot targeting EDL

An Islamist terror cell planned to attack a British white power demonstration using a combination of homemade nail bombs, knives and sawn-off shotguns. The plan was only narrowly averted by the group's own incompetence. The Birmingham-based gang had intended to attack an

English Defence League (EDL) rally in June last year, with the stash of weaponry. Read more

EU naval warship rescues 14 Indian sailors after hijack

The European Union anti-piracy taskforce has rescued 14 Indian sailors who were about to be hijacked by Somali pirates. Operation Commander of the EU Naval Force Somalia (EUNAVFOR), said the Indians were rescued by the EU warships after the pirates who took control of their cargo vessel abandoned the attack in the Gulf of Aden. ## Giant X-ray leads fight against EU cigarette smugglers

Revenue and customs failed to meet any of its targets on reducing the smuggling of illicit tobacco into the UK over the last year according to a report from the National Audit Office. The report says the department has made progress in some areas but failed to seize as many cigarettes or prevent as much revenue being lost as it said it would. Video Report

Trafficker jailed, caned for selling drugs to school students

A drug trafficker, who sold cannabis mainly to students of international schools, was sentenced to eight years' jail and five strokes of the cane by a district court. Selvam V. Katorain, 39, pleaded guilty to trafficking and consumption charges. Read more
