Airshow reflects Singapore's position as major aerospace player

The Republic is fast becoming the top player in Asia Pacific's aviation and aerospace industry, with a growing number of companies setting up shop here to leverage on its robust infrastructure and talent pool. And as Singapore kick-starts its biggest airshow yet this week, a strong global interest in Asia's growth opportunities should further cement its status as a regional hub. Read more

Singapore's aviation hub status likely to grow: Rolls-Royce

The Republic's status as an aviation hub is likely to be enhanced as more companies will want to tap into the expanding aerospace ecosystem here, according to Rolls-Royce's Regional Director for Southeast Asia and the Pacific Jonathan Asherson. Mr Asherson said the company had benefited from the country's talent pool, infrastructure and geographical location as it ramped up its maintenance and manufacturing presence here, and other businesses will want to follow suit. Indonesia defends naming navy ship after "bombers"

Despite Singapore raising concerns over its naming of a navy ship after two of its marines who had bombed MacDonald's House in Singapore in 1965, the Indonesian government insists that it has the right to do so, and dismissed the concerns raised by Singapore. Indonesia had decided to name a patrol vessel – Usman Harun – after the country's national heroes, Usman bin Haji Muhammad Ali and Harun bin Said, who were later executed (in 1968) for the 1965 MacDonald House bombing in Singapore. U.S. Bans All Liquids From Carry-Ons on Flights to Russia

The U.S. is banning all liquids, gels and aerosols in carry-on luggage on flights between the U.S. and Russia, tightening security a day before the Winter Olympics open in Sochi. The new restrictions follow yesterday's advisory from the U.S. government that warned airlines of the possibility that terrorists might hide bomb-making material in toothpaste tubes that could be assembled into an explosive device during the flight or later. Sevens lifejacket report prompts aircraft check

Reports of Sevens-goers wearing aviation-style lifejackets similar to the ones used by Jetstar caused the company to check all its planes as a precautionary measure. The company received a report of people dressed up for the Sevens rugby tournament in Wellington possibly wearing the lifejackets over the weekend. A spokesman for the airline says the lifejackets the company uses aren't branded and a precautionary check of aircraft travelling through Wellington found none of the floatation devices missing. Napolitano plays down US fears over Sochi Olympic Games security

Janet Napolitano, the leader of the US delegation at the Sochi Winter Olympics, on Sunday tried to draw a line under domestic criticism of the Games by defending Russian security and saying gay athletes appeared to be welcome. The former secretary of homeland security played down concerns over terror threats, heavy-handed security and state-sanctioned homophobia in an upbeat assessment which contrasted with sniping from some US politicians and media organisations. A convicted terrorist has exposed security gaps at Sydney airport after boarding a flight to Syria on his brother's passport

Australian officials yesterday blamed a "fairly major breakdown" in border security for the reported escape of a convicted terrorist through Sydney Airport to join the conflict in Syria. New South Wales state Premier Barry O'Farrell expressed concern after media reports that Khaled Sharrouf, who served almost four years in jail after pleading guilty to a 2005 conspiracy to attack Sydney, had fled. Media reports said Sharrouf boarded a flight to Malaysia at Sydney Airport in December using his brother's passport and was now believed to be in Syria. Read more

China, Afghanistan agree to further promote ties

Before the opening ceremony of the Games, Chinese President Xi Jinping met with his Afghan counterpart, Hamid Karzai, in an effort to boost ties between the two nations. They pledged to strengthen cooperation in the fields of security, economy and politics. Border security is of great significance to both China and Afghanistan. And, the anti-terrorism effort in China's western areas makes cooperation with Afghanistan even more important. Video Report

Lisbon Airport unifies manual and automated border control processes

The Portuguese Immigration and Borders Service (SEF) has installed 35 of Vision-Box's document readers for manual border control to unify the border processes at Lisbon Airport. The installation of the new readers has allowed for the integration of the manual and automated border control systems under a single platform. This will allow SEF agents at the manual border control booths to monitor and deal with passengers who are referred to them by the automated border control e-gates. Read more

Gold smugglers turn creative to beat law

Gold melted into seed-shaped chips and hidden in dates coming from Dubai, bars broken into granules and mixed with other metals to make it look like ore, belts with one kg gold buckles and torches carrying gold batteries. As gold smuggling reaches unprecedented high and authorities crack down, smugglers are devising ever-new ways to bring in the yellow metal. Read more
