Suspected bomb threat forces plane to make emergency landing at KCI

A suspected bomb threat forced a plane to make an emergency landing at Kansas City International Airport, an airport spokesman said. American Airlines flight 24 was heading from San Francisco to New York. The plane had to land at KCI because authorities found a flash drive left in the plane's lavatory. They considered that suspicious and told passengers they were investigating a bomb scare and had to get everyone off the plane.

Liquid scanners: Europe testing technology that could change airport security

It's been seven years since a major change in airline security, but restrictions for carry-on liquids could someday be a thing of the past. An American-made scanning device is now being used at airports in Europe. Battelle, a research group based in Columbus, Ohio, has developed a new type of liquid scanner they say works fast enough to serve the world's busiest airports without compromising security.

Montréal-Trudeau implements innovative solution to reduce security queues

Montréal-Trudeau Airport has introduced the new SecurXpress service, which allows passengers to bypass security queues if they arrive at the checkpoint at a specified time. Passengers can register their name and flight information online or via mobile phone and they then receive details of what time they should arrive at the security screening area. If passengers arrive on time, they can benefit from access to a fast track security lane to avoid any potential queues.

Airline safety performance continues to soar

The world's airlines had one of their safest years on record in 2013. There were 29 airline accidents last year, which, combined, resulted in a record-low 265 fatalities, according to the Aviation Safety Network, a private research group in the Netherlands. That's out of about 31 million commercial flights worldwide.

And the world's safest airline is ...

Flight-phobics, relax -- a list of the world's safest airlines has just been released. Top of the ranking from AirlineRatings.com of the safest carriers in 2013 is the Australian airline Qantas. Awarding it a full seven stars, the website cites the airline's fatality-free flying record from the beginning of the jet era in the early 1950s.

Neiman Marcus becomes second victim of cyber-security breach

Luxury merchant Neiman Marcus confirmed Saturday that thieves stole some of its customers' payment card information and made unauthorized charges over the holiday season, becoming the second retailer in recent weeks to announce it had fallen victim to a cyber-security attack. The hacking, coming weeks after Target Corp. revealed its own breach, underscores the increasing challenges that merchants have in thwarting security breaches. Video Report

Winter Olympics: Russia arrests five 'terror suspects'

Russian authorities say they have detained five members of a "banned international terrorist organisation" in the restive North Caucasus region. The arrests were made in the town of Nalchik, some 300km (185 miles) east of the Black Sea resort of Sochi, the host of next month's Winter Olympics. Russia earlier announced it was deploying more than 30,000 police and interior ministry troops to the region. Read more

Haul of £33k collected by terrorists who posed as aid fundraisers will go to charity

Thousands of pounds collected by Islamist terrorists posing as aid fundraisers will be given to a genuine charity. Six jailed extremists, who plotted a bombing to rival the 7/7 attacks, have been ordered to hand over £33,000 by a judge. They had posed as official fundraisers in Birmingham but kept most of the cash to 'finance their terrorist ambitions'. Read more

Afghanistan releasing 72 prisoners considered security threat by US

Afghan President Hamid Karzai said the country is going to release all but 16 of 88 prisoners considered a security threat by the United States. In a statement Thursday, Karzai says that a review of the prisoners' cases by Afghan intelligence and judicial officials turned up no evidence of wrongdoing for 45 of the detainees. Karzai says there was insufficient evidence on another 27 and that they must be released. Read more

Thailand crisis: Protesters begin Bangkok 'shutdown'

Protesters have begun blocking roads in parts of the Thai capital, Bangkok, in a bid to oust the government before snap elections on 2 February. The protesters are building barricades and occupying key road junctions. The government has deployed 18,000 security personnel to maintain order. Read more
