New ISIS Cyber Campaign Announced as Supporters Share U.S. Agency Vulnerabilities

A group operating under ISIS' hacking division announced in a Friday statement a new campaign "to destroy your websites, your devices and your data," while an ISIS supporters' IT help desk highlighted a Senate report revealing cybersecurity failures and vulnerabilities at several government agencies. At the beginning of the year, the new Caliphate Cyber Shield was announced as "an extension of the United Cyber Caliphate (UCC)."

Nine Killed as Shooter Clad in Body Armor Attacks Patrons Outside Dayton Bar

Nine people were killed and 26 injured by a gunman who opened fired on patrons enjoying the summer evening on a patio at a Dayton, Ohio, bar. The 1 a.m. local time attack came just hours after 20 people were slain and 27 injured at a crowded Walmart in El Paso, Texas. The shooter was killed in the attack outside Ned Peppers bar in Dayton's Oregon District, a busy stretch of restaurants and bars. He was described being masked and wearing ear protection, wearing body armor, and wielding a .223 caliber rifle with extra magazines.

FBI Document Warns Conspiracy Theories Are a New Domestic Terrorism Threat

The FBI for the first time has identified fringe conspiracy theories as a domestic terrorist threat, according to a previously unpublicized document obtained by Yahoo News. The FBI intelligence bulletin from the bureau's Phoenix field office, dated May 30, 2019, describes "conspiracy theory-driven domestic extremists," as a growing threat, and notes that it is the first such report to do so. It lists a number of arrests, including some that haven't been publicized, related to violent incidents motivated by fringe beliefs. The document specifically mentions QAnon, a shadowy network that believes in a deep state conspiracy against President Trump, and Pizzagate, the theory that a pedophile ring including Clinton associates was being run out of the basement of a Washington, D.C., pizza restaurant (which didn't actually have a basement).

Terrorism Experts See 'Stunning,' Terrifying Parallels Between ISIS and U.S. White Nationalists

There are significant differences between the Islamic State and the white nationalist terrorists who have been ramping up attacks in the U.S., but "the parallels are stunning," terrorism expert Will McCants tells The New York Times. In fact, writes Max Fisher at the Times, "white nationalist terrorism is following a progression eerily similar to that of jihadism under the leadership of the Islamic State, in ways that do much to explain why the attacks have suddenly grown so frequent and deadly."

Al-Qaeda 'Is as Strong as It Has Ever Been,' State Department Says

Al-Qaeda and its affiliates remain as much of a threat to the U.S. as "it has ever been" after the terrorist group rebuilt itself while the U.S. and other nations focused on destroying ISIS in Iraq and Syria, a State Department official said Thursday. "Al-Qaeda has been strategic and patient over the past several years," Nathan Sales, the State Department's coordinator for counterterrorism, said at a briefing in Washington. "It's let ISIS absorb the brunt of the world's counterterrorism efforts while patiently reconstituting itself. What we see today is an al-Qaeda that is as strong as it has ever been."

ISIS Preparing Women to Participate on the Front Line of Future Endeavors

Head of the Iraqi Intelligence Forces Abu Ali al-Basri laid claims to the Iraqi Arabic language newspaper Al Sabaah that the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) have been preparing and training women to participate in future battles after the overwhelming defeat they suffered at the hands of coalition forces. The women fighters are being trained in Iraq, mainly in the area of Mosul, as well as in Syria and Tunisia in order to take a more active role in the organization's upcoming terror aspirations.

New Wave of Terrorist Attacks Possible Before End of Year, UN Says

The United Nations has warned that a recent pause in international terrorist violence may soon end, with a new wave of attacks possible before the end of the year. In a report, specialist monitors at the UN security council paint a worrying picture of a global Islamist extremist movement that continues to pose a significant threat despite recent setbacks. The authors raise concerns about up to 30,000 foreigners who travelled to the "caliphate" to fight and who may still be alive.

AI Lie Detector Developed for Airport Security

A group of researchers are quietly commercialising an artificial intelligence-driven lie detector, which they hope will be the future of airport security. Discern Science International is the start-up behind a deception detection tool named the Avatar, which features a virtual border guard that asks travellers questions. The machine, which has been tested by border services and in airports, is designed to make the screening process at border security more efficient, and to weed out people with dangerous or illegal intentions more accurately than human guards are able to do. But its development also raises questions about whether a person's propensity to lie can be accurately measured by an algorithm.

Ideological Infighting in ISIS May Lead to Terror Group's Undoing

The Islamic State has always had serious theological disputes within its ranks. Leadership tried to paper over the cracks, usually unsuccessfully. If unresolved, this may lead to an IS breakup. The Islamic State has a record of fighting almost as much with its supposed allies, and even within itself, as it does against its enemies in the West. Cole Bunzel, a research fellow at Yale Law School and an expert on the jihadi movement, has been studying these trends and earlier this year published some of his findings.
