Child suicide bombers, and the shelter rehabilitating them in Indonesia

Flung off their motorcycle, Amirah could only watch as her parents blew themselves up. The eight-year-old, who was with her mother and father as they rode up to a checkpoint outside Surabaya's police headquarters, was the sole survivor of an ISIS-inspired suicide bombing in May 2018. Just the day before, another family of suicide bombers - including nine- and 12-year-old girls whose parents had strapped explosive vests to - attacked three churches. A third family planning attacks involving their four children, aged 10 to 17, were confronted by police at their home.

Cathay shares fall more than 2per cent after chairman resigns

Shares in Cathay Pacific Airways Ltd fell more than 2per cent in early trade on Thursday following the resignation of its chairman after the market closed on Wednesday. The departure of John Slosar was announced less than three weeks after mounting Chinese regulatory scrutiny led to the shock exit of its chief executive, Rupert Hogg.

American Airlines mechanic in Miami charged with sabotaging plane

An American Airlines mechanic was arrested Thursday on a sabotage charge accusing him of disabling a navigation system on a flight with 150 people aboard before it was scheduled to take off from Miami International Airport earlier this summer. The reason, according to a criminal complaint affidavit filed in Miami federal court: Abdul-Majeed Marouf Ahmed Alani, a veteran employee, was upset over stalled union contract negotiations. None of the passengers and crew on the flight to Nassau were injured because the tampering with the so-called air data module caused an error alert as the pilots powered up the plane's engines on the runway July 17, according to a criminal complaint affidavit filed in Miami federal court.

CBP Stops Passenger with Ballistic Armor Leading to Discovery of Weapons Cache

On August 18, a Chinese national arrived at the Detroit Metropolitan Airport from Beijing. When first encountered, the passenger gave a negative declaration to carrying any prohibited items. During an examination of the traveler's luggage, U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) Officers discovered undeclared ballistic armor and other tactical apparel. CBP Officers also discovered evidence that the traveler possessed a significant weapons cache at his U.S. residence, which appeared to include prohibited items such as high capacity magazines and "bump-stock" devices.

Yuma Sector Agents Find Meth Disguised as Ice Pops

Blythe Station agents working at the Highway 78 Immigration Checkpoint arrested a lawfully admitted permanent resident and a United States citizen for the transportation of more than nine pounds of methamphetamine over the weekend. Sunday afternoon, a Border Patrol canine assigned to the primary inspection lane alerted to an odor it was trained to detect emitting from a Toyota Corolla. Agents referred the vehicle to the secondary inspection area, where they searched a cooler containing brightly colored bags disguised as frozen ice pops. They were determined to be methamphetamine with an approximate weight of 9.21 pounds. The 28-year-old female driver and her male 38-year-old passenger were both arrested.

Thailand launches 5G vehicle surveillance tech

A Thailand mobile operator launched new 5G-equipped surveillance vehicle technology. This technology will help detect suspicious items and automobiles in southern Thailand. The prototype innovation, called surveillance and security vehicles, was presented at a media event in Songkhla recently. Video analytics and AI will log video data from CCTV cameras on vehicles into a central control room via the 5G network. This enables the analysis of images and identification of objects on the cars. For example, data on suspect license plates, car models, the colour and the appearance of vehicles will be generated.

The Surprising (and Successful) Use of Love by Extremists

How do recruiters ever persuade people to join extremist groups? One key weapon in their arsenal is something you've probably never heard of: love bombing. Simply put, love bombing is smothering prospective new recruits with so much love and affection that they become overwhelmed and don't stop to consider the downside of a new group. They may also feel guilty in rejecting the overtures of people who are going out of their way to be nice to them. Typically this will involve an extremely high volume of compliments and other forms of flattery. But it can go much further than that, including gifts, invitations to events, high quality food and flirtation from members of opposite gender.

TSA: Man Arrested at JFK Airport After Gun Found Hidden in Tar-Like Substance

A man was arrested at JFK Airport Monday after Transportation Security Administration officers allegedly found a gun hidden in what appeared to be tar. According to TSA, officers found the gun among his carry-on items at one of the airport checkpoints. The .45 caliber handgun was accompanied by 20 loose bullets, TSA said, adding that the gun was wrapped in what appeared to be some sort of fiberglass inside a case covered in what appeared to be tar. Subsequently, after the officers spotted the gun, they contacted the Port Authority Police, who arrived at the checkpoint, confiscated the firearm and detained the man, a resident of Barbados, for questioning before arresting him on weapons charges, according to TSA.
