Yazidi Girl Faints Confronting Her ISIS Rapist on Iraqi TV

A Yazidi girl who was kidnapped by ISIS and repeatedly raped fainted confronting her attacker on Iraqi TV. The ISIS terrorist was captured and is now in a prison in Iraq. On the show, he admitted to raping and beating her. The confrontation, which aired on the Iraqi TV channel al-Iraqiya, enabled Ashwaq Haji Hamid to face down her rapist, who she said raped her three times a day and beat her three or four times a day. Hamid, crying, eventually collapsed under the emotion of the situation and fainted in the TV studio.

China Shuts Down American Teen on Tik Tok

Sandwiched between a makeup tutorial, 17-year-old Feroza Aziz used her Tik Tok account to turn her beauty vlog into an awareness campaign about China's severe abuse of the Uighur (Muslim) population. She quickly felt the brunt of the long arm of China's ever-increasing censorship. Aziz made a series of viral videos on her Tik Tok account @getmefamouspartthree exposing the abuse, Aziz found that her account had been suspended. The videos begin as makeup tutorials but quickly switch to exposing how the Chinese are putting the Uighurs into "concentration" camps, separating family members from each other, raping and murdering them. For its part, TikTok said her account was suspended because it was connected to another accounts of hers (@getmefamousplzsr), which the platform said it banned for "violating rules." But after the teen took to Twitter to publicize her suspension, Tik Tok reinstated her account and issued a public "apology." While it was not much of an apology (the company stood behind its initial decision to suspend Aziz's account), they did admit that their review process "will not be perfect."

Crowded places, a continuing security challenge

"ISIS and Al Qaeda encrypted invite only channels on Telegram continue to encourage vehicle attacks into crowded places and give instructions as to the best methods of attack," said Vasco Amador, CEO of Global Intelligence Insight, a company that has penetrated and monitors many of these groups. "The threat has never gone away," he added. Read more at NBC News. The differing threat to crowded places was brought starkly home by the Novichok attack in Salisbury against the former Russian Intelligence Officer Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia that could have had a devastating impact on so many more people if it were not for the response of the authorities. However, the death of Dawn Sturgess and hospitalisation of Detective Sergeant Nick Bailey and Dawn's partner Charlie Rowley hinted to the potential of this attack. 2019 has been successful for the security services with a number of attacks being stopped, but the UK Counter Terror Police continue to remind everyone that they have approximately 750 active investigations going on with over 3000 people of immediate concern and another 20,000 on their radar!

Here's what travelers failed to get past Sioux Falls airport security over a span of three weeks

Thousands of travelers will pass through the Sioux Falls airport over the next five weeks, toting along their carry-on items, presents and more for the holiday season. And many of them will bring prohibited items, whether inadvertently or not. The TSA at the Sioux Falls Regional Airport collected the prohibited items they confiscated over three weeks from October to November and showed them to the Argus Leader.

Kurdish-Led Forces Bust ISIS Human Smuggling Ring in North Syria

A local counter-terrorism unit in the northern Syrian city of Manbij on Saturday arrested members of an Islamic State cell allegedly involved in smuggling at least six women connected to the extremist group from a camp under the control of the Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) to Turkish-held areas along the country's northern border. The SDF-affiliated Manbij Military Council's media office claimed in a statement that a man named Abu Naji, a leader of the Turkish-backed Ahrar Al-Sham paramilitary group, was responsible for smuggling "ISIS elements and their families to areas controlled by the Turkish occupation." It continued, "After investigating this cell, it was found that ISIS members who are currently fighting in the ranks of the Turkish occupation mercenaries are trying to smuggle their families out of the Al-Hol camp."

San Diego Man Rose to Leadership in Al-Shabaab, Say Prosecutors

An indictment was unsealed in federal court today charging Jihad Serwan Mostafa, a 37-year-old U.S. citizen and former San Diego resident who is on the FBI's Most Wanted Terrorist List, with terrorism violations arising from his critical role in providing support to the militant Islamic terrorist organization, al-Shabaab. The superseding indictment alleges that from no later than March 2008 through in or about February 2017, Mostafa conspired to provide material support, including himself as personnel, to terrorists; conspired to provide material support to al-Shabaab, a designated foreign terrorist organization (FTO); and provided material support to al-Shabaab.

Latest Islamist Tactic to Undermine Programs Preventing Extremism

Is it just an Islamist response to call programs preventing extremism part of the surveillance state — or is there more to it? The answer may depend on which country we're discussing and who is being brought to the table to have that discussion. Over in the UK, Roundtable recently hosted a conversation that brought together four experts in the field — two of them Muslim — to talk about the progress and pitfalls of programs to prevent extremism. While there is a concern in the UK to make sure prevention programming doesn't unfairly spotlight Muslims, the same standards don't necessarily apply in the U.S. To date, there is no national umbrella organization in the U.S. for countering violent extremism as there is in the UK.

There is also no cohesive conversation on genuine concerns that can arise in such a space. Yet in the U.S., instead of a conversation that moves the needle, we have Islamists and their allies setting the tone without participation from non-Islamist Muslims — meaning, there is no nuance or balance in that conversation.
